The Book They Tried to Suppress:

Katharine the Great:
Katharine Graham and Her
Washington Post Empire

By Deborah Davis

When this book first came out, Katharine Graham, the powerful head of the Washington Post and Newsweek, pressured the publisher to have it yanked from the bookstore shelves and shredded.

The author brought suit against the original publisher, and, after a lengthy battle, won a major settlement, reaffirming the right of an author to the best efforts of the publisher.

Now this compelling biography has been revised and updated, to take the reader beyond Watergate to Contragate, into the Reagan-Bush years. This is the book that names Deep Throat, details the CIA connections of longtime Post editor Ben Bradlee, and describes the vast influence of Katharine Graham, perhaps the most influential woman in America.

Illustrated, indexed, 344 pp.; hardcover, $21.95; paperback $14.95.

Destiny Betrayed:
JFK, Cuba, and the Garrison Case

By James D'Eugenio
Introduction by Zachary Sklar

The newest, clearest, most up-to-date work on the assassination of John F. Kennedy and on Jim Garrison's thwarted prosecution of murder charges.

Justice Betrayed spans the post-World War II era up to the present, incorporating the latest revelations and most current research. This book takes us back through each step of Garrison's ground-breaking investigation, minute by minute and witness by witness, through the trial of Clay Shaw, and highlights the relentless campaign of government and media disinformation to which Garrison—and now Oliver Stone—have been subjected.

With an introduction by Zachary Sklar, co-author of the screenplay for JFK.

Hardcover, 288 pp.; profusely illustrated; indexed; extensive notes; $19.95.
